Product description:

Robert Parker's Wine Advocate (Jeb Dunnuck, déc. 2013): "More substantial, with a meaty, muscular feel, the 2011 Cote Rotie La Landonne exhibits lots of olive tapenade, underbrush, crushed rock and blackberry-styled fruit on the nose. Full-bodied, nicely concentrated (especially for a 2011) and yet voluptuously textured, with moderate, fine tannin, it will round into form relatively early, yet evolve gracefully for 15-20 years." 94/100.

Robert Parker's Wine Advocate (déc. 2012): "Readers looking for a slightly more masculine, muscular style should check out the 2011 Cote Rotie La Landonne. It possesses a dense, saturated purple color as well as abundant notes of charcoal/creosote, truffles, blackberries and cassis. Full-bodied, moderately tannic, dense and atypically rich, long and structured for a 2011, it will benefit from 3-4 years of cellaring, and drink well over the following 15 years." 90-92+/100.
