La Revue du Vin de France (K. Valentin, Nov. 2025, Roussillon: the infinite nobility of Catalan whites) : Olivier Pithon arrived in Calce over twenty years ago. From the start, the Angers winemaker, brother of Jo Pithon, mastered the acidity of the grapes from the South, quite different from the light Chenins of the Loire, and his production, half red, half white, is captivating. Today, he still produces some of the most desirable cuvées in the area, with a particular sensitivity towards the whites. A fervent advocate for expressing terroirs through Grenache Gris and Macabeu, he also plants Clairette blanche and rosé, Bourboulenc, and Albarino... All means are good to find freshness, starting with the ability of the grapes to withstand drought. Olivier Pithon bets on the aging potential of the blancs, so we delight in wines that have at least taken two years.
